

Amanda Galindo
Sara Islas
Humanities- Luchadores
October 6, 2016

Gender inequality is something that affects every women at some point in their life, whether if it was limits set by other people or just stereotypes. Women are under more pressure to follow the standards of social media, as well like we are put through more obstacles. Yet not have the same outcome as our opposing gender. The annual median income of women in 2014 was $39,621 and for men the annual median income was $50,383 which would make a 21.9% wage difference. I also feel like women's voices are often not heard and often not able to stand up for themselves. In a 2012 study 92% of women reported experiencing some form of sexual violence in public spaces in their lifetime. 88% reported experiencing some form of verbal sexual harassment. Overall I believe that we should all see every person as equal beings and give everyone the same and equal voice. I don't see how different characteristics could set people apart from one another.

Works Cited:

<http://www.pay-equity.org/info-time.html>

<https://www.womankind.org.uk/policy-and-campaigns/women's-rights/facts-about-women's-rights>